

Dear FCC: This is in reference to the Telemarketing issue currently On the docket. My comments are as follows:

1. There should be a perpetual, nationwide do not call list. This list should be maintained and followed by all businesses that interact with American phone numbers. This list should also include fax numbers and data lines.
2. This list should be perpetual in that once a number is placed on that list, it will remain as do not call perpetually--unless that number is disconnected, then it may be called again.
3. This list should be accessible from any telemarketer--ie if a telemarketer calls my home, and I request they place me on their do not call list, they should also ask if I would like to be placed on the nationwide list, and should comply with my request.
4. This process of do not call, should also extend to tax exempt organizations and political organizations, regardless of party affiliation of the resident--Their lists may be individual, but they should still be required to maintain a 5 year minimum do not call list. This should include all organizations that are tax exempt--regardless of what they are based on.
5. While under a separate item, this rule change should also apply to email SPAM, and other unsolicited electronic email. My dial up connection should entitle me to protection from SPAM as it does from unsolicited telemarketers. Unsolicited email is clogging computer systems and phone lines with time wasted. The same national/international do not contact list should apply to phone, fax, and email telemarketers/marketers.

Thank you for your time.

Mike Romo
